Young Writers: (Grades K-10)

9:00 am - 11:30 am

Our children are potential authors with important stories to tell. This section introduces students to writing with an interactive dialogue journal and fosters a love of reading through experimental, hands-on, fun-filled activities. Our workshops offer a unique opportunity for students to develop their talent as writers. Experienced teachers guide students through a step-by-step approach to writing: prewriting, precomposing, writing, sharing, revising, editing, and evaluating. In this class, students will:

College Admissions Essay Workshop

The purpose of this course is to introduce students to the complexities of the college application process in the 21st century and to provide a hands-on, authentic, and workshop-based approach to crafting their personal statements. This includes but is not limited to: drafting responses to the Common Application 2018-2019 prompts; the UC Personal Insight Questions 2018-2019; and supplemental questions required by many private schools. Students will have access to models and mentor texts and will also investigate scholarships and financial aid opportunities.

Carol Mooney is currently teaching Advanced Placement English Literature and Composition at Villa Park High School in OUSD and she has worked with students on their college applications for over thirty years. She is a teacher/consultant for the UCI Writing Project and has been involved in multiple instructional research projects since 1988.

Digital Storytelling Course

What does it mean to be literate in the 21st century? National learning standards state that modern students should develop the professional uses. The practice of digital storytelling has attracted much attention in education toward this end due to the effective ways in which it provides students with the opportunity to simultaneously develop both their "traditional" literacies of reading and writing as well as "new literacies" of digital production and communication. In this class, students will learn how to create digital stories using video production equipment, video editing software, and computer devices. They will learn to record sound, writing scripts, create storyboards, use green screen technology, edit videos, and showcase videos through distribution channels such as Youtube. Working individually or collaboratively, students will go through the film-making process of pre-production, production, and post-production. They will write, direct, and produce different genres of digital stories that include the documentary, narrative, and research reports. In addition to being fun, activities will be aligned with NCTE, ISTE, 21st Century Learning, and Common Core State Standards.

Dr. Vu enjoys helping students of all ages to create digital stories and developing effective ways to use digital stories in classroom. He holds three graduate degrees related to literacy development, digital storytelling, and technology, including an M.F.A. in film and television from UCLA; an M.A. in education with emphasis in TESOL, and a Ph. D. in Education, with an emphasis in language, literacy, and technology.

Argument Writing & Research

This workshop will introduce students in grades 6-8 to the foundations of argument writing. Students will use critical thinking skills to analyze literary and nonfiction texts, evaluate multiple perspectives, use strategies of debate, and learn the structure of argument. Using technology to enhance argument writing will also be addressed.

Mrs. Naughton teaches in the Fountain Valley School District. She has been teaching fifth grade for eighteen years. She has been a Writing Project Fellow since 2008.

AP Language and Composition Prep. Course

The AP Language and Composition Prep. Course offered by the UCI Summer Writing Project focuses on strategies for the reading and writing components. Students will take practice tests with guided feedback. Students will write two practice essays to be scored by a CollegeBoard-trained teacher. An individual teacher-student conference will also be a part of the class.

PSAT/NMSQT Prep. Course

This class will prepare students with strategies for success on the Preliminary SAT/ National Merit Scholarship Qualifying Test. Included will be techniques for reading and interpreting informational graphics such as tables, graphs, and charts. All questions on the PSAT are multiple choice and unlike the SAT there is no writing component. The reading test measures command of evidence, words in context, and analysis in history/social studies and science.

SAT Writing Prep. Workshop

Improve your skills in preparation for success on the new SAT by enrolling in the UCI Summer Youth Writing Program SAT Prep. Workshop. Students will learn numerous strategies to prepare them for the test. The following test components are included:

- Reading Test: Students are asked to interpret texts and graphics
- Writing and Language Test: Students are asked to use editing and proofreading skills, recognize words in context, and demonstrate their understanding of Standard English Conventions
- SAT Essay: The essay is now optional but required by many colleges. Students are asked to read a text from various genres, provide analysis, and write an essay from a prompt.
